

PEDESTRIAN KILLED WHEN HIT BY A TRUCK AT PARKLAND; MAN HURT AS CAR OVERTURNS HERE; BROTHERS INJURED

William F. Street, Sr., 47, of Parkland, Instantly Killed—
James Fraser's Car Wrecked on Route 13—Staublein
Brothers Injured When Hit by Car As They Repair Machine in Front of Home.

A pedestrian was killed on the Lincoln highway at Parkland early this morning; a motorist injured when his car is believed to have overturned on Route 13, just outside Bristol borough limits yesterday afternoon; and two Bristol Township men hurt as they repaired their machine.

The dead:
William F. Street, Sr., 47, Sunset avenue, Parkland.
The injured:
James Fraser, Jr., 40, of 8600 block, Teal avenue, Philadelphia.
Jacob J. and Elmer Staublein, Magnolia Road.

The fatal accident, according to Cpl. R. D. Evans, Langhorne barracks, Penna. State Police, occurred at 12:20 this morning on Route 1, at Parkland. Mr. Street was walking along the highway, the report shows, when he was struck by a truck owned by General Baking Co., Philadelphia, and operated by Rudolph Perl, of the 300 block, Unruh street, Philadelphia. Death for Street, due to a fracture of the skull, was instantaneous. The body was removed to the Horner funeral home, Langhorne, then sent to Philadelphia for burial.

Bucks County Coroner J. Alfred Rigby, Cornwells Heights, investigated also. Perl was released under $1500 bail at a preliminary hearing before Justice of the Peace Horace Cooper, Langhorne.

Survivors of Mr. Street, whose wife died a year ago, are the following daughters and sons: Mrs. Joseph Rhoads, Elaine Claire, Ruth M., and Brenda Ann Street, of Parkland; Mrs. Joseph A. Ziegler, William F. Street, Jr., Philadelphia; and four grandchildren.

Fraser was injured near the entrance to Rohm & Haas Co. plant, on Route 13, at 4:45 yesterday afternoon. According to Pennsylvania State Trooper Davidcock, of Langhorne barracks, it is presumed that the Fraser car overturned. Fraser was unconscious when removed to Harriman Hospital and officers could secure no details from him at that time. Fraser was alone in the machine. He later regained consciousness and returned home. The machine was totally wrecked, it is stated. The injured was removed to the hospital by Bucks County Rescue Squad.

The Staublein brothers stated they were repairing their machine in front of their Magnolia Road home last evening, when a motorist

SUBMIT BLDG. PLANS FOR STATE APPROVAL

Draw Plans for Proposed
Edgely Memorial Bldg.;
Now at Harrisburg

FUND IS NOW $16,190.00

EDGELEY, Nov. 8.—Plans for the proposed Edgely memorial building have been forwarded to Harrisburg for approval by State officials, according to members of the building fund committee of Headley Manor Fire Co. This step is required because the proposed building will be a public one.

The committee states that construction at present is not considered practical due to existing conditions affecting material and labor. "The essential part of the building will be erected as soon as relief is in sight," states the committee. "Plans for this part include social room, fire department headquarters, refreshment room, kitchen, rest rooms and furnace room."

The exterior will be cement plastered, cinder block structure, with a brick front. It is designed to serve as a memorial to those who have served in the armed forces during World War II.

Following are contributions to the building fund:

Rotarians Quizzed On Rules of Rotary Club

THE president of the Bensalem Rotary Club, A. Kurtz King, was in charge of the program at the meeting of the Bristol Rotary Club, held at the Elks' Home yesterday afternoon, when he conducted a question bee for the Bristol Rotarians on questions relative to the rules and regulations of Rotary and Rotary International.

A good attendance marked the meeting at which chairman Richard W. Fechtenburg presided.

SHOULD TRUMAN QUIT?

The suggestion has been made by Democratic spokesman that President Truman ought to resign, first naming a Republican as Secretary of State so that the latter could succeed him in the White House.

This is not likely to happen; but the fact that the proposal should be made at all, in apparent good faith, and with plausible arguments back of it, is most interesting.

Of course, the motives which make it appealing to certain Democrats are perfectly obvious. They want to "get off the spot." They want to "get rid of Truman"; would be quite pleased to see him accept the role of "goat" for the party's troubles.

And of course also they think that they would automatically shift their own difficulties to the shoulders of the Republicans.

There is one simple reason, however, why too many Democrats will oppose the suggestion for it to have any chance of being carried out. That is the patronage which the White House controls.

Under the fiction that they were needed to win the war, some 3,000,000 Democratic hopefuls have been given jobs on the public payroll, and have been kept there since the war ended because that was the only way the present Democratic leadership saw a chance to win the recent election.

Because of its reliance in recent years on machine tactics in politics, with the Democratic gangs such as Hague, Kelly and Pendergast on the one hand, and the CIO-PAC groups on the other, the Democratic heads have become patronage-mad.

Nothing could be more appalling, from such a point of view, than the thought to losing these three million jobs—just when they figure their party needs them most!

Of course, many of these unneeded payrollers now will have to go. If Congress can't get rid of them in any other way, it will simply "starve" them out by refusing to appropriate money to pay them.

As long as the President is a Democrat, however, he can at least be the one to decide which is to go back to work in private affairs; and those who are not dropped can be hand-picked to do the Democratic party the most good.

The arguments in favor of President Truman stepping out of office have more plausibility than logic. Comparison is drawn with the British situation, where a Prime Minister is ousted the moment the legislative branch refuses to accept his policies. The

55 Veterans Won Election

Washington—A survey disclosed today that 55 veterans of World War Two have won election to the 80th Congress, 51 in the House and four more in the Senate.

Many more tell by the wayside, however. A total of 197 World War II veterans lost in campaigns for a seat in Congress.

Both the House and Senate will witness a substantial increase in veterans of World War II when the new Congress convenes January 3. Only 11 veterans of the Second World War alone sit in the present Congress, 19 in the House and one in the Senate.

The 80th Congress will include among its 531 members a total of 240 veterans of the Spanish American War and the first and second World Wars. Thus, 45 per cent of the new Congress will be made up of veterans, a much larger percentage than at present.

Wants Rent Control Eased

Washington—Sen. Hickenlooper, Iowa Republican, proposed today that the Republican Congress whittle down rent control to affect only congested areas and then hand it over to states to administer.

The Senator advocated also that OPA be required to recognize "provable cost increases" and to grant rental increases to cover them.

Offers to Barter Gorizia for Trieste

Rome—The Yugoslav offer to barter Gorizia for Trieste—which observers said today would pave the way for ultimate annexation of the port city of Trieste by Marshal Tito—resulted in dangerous friction within the Italian Government.

WORK OF PUPILS IN KINDERGARTEN OF GREAT VALUE

Pre-School Experience Seen As Great Benefit Among
First Graders

REPORT GIVEN BOARD

Croydon School To Be Open
For Public Inspection
Next Wednesday

The work of the kindergarten in the Bristol Township public schools is of definite value according to a report submitted to the school board last evening by Mrs. Sarah B. Buckley, a member of the faculty.

A follow-up of the children now in the first grade, after one year of pre-school experience, shows that this pre-school experience, of definite benefit since approximately 80 per cent of all kindergarten children are ready to read without further "readiness." "Each first grade teacher, without exception, who has kindergarten children in her group, assured me," said Mrs. Buckley "that she noticed a readiness most commendable in those having kindergarten experience—chiefly habits of industry, ability to follow directions and a general all-around fitness to make progress in their school work. Mothers are most enthusiastic about the kindergarten, acclaiming they are able to notice a great change for the better in the attitude and development of their youngsters."

The kindergarten enrollment, in October was 109, with a daily average attendance of 87.

The school board met last evening with Albert Stiles, the president, presiding, and all members of the board in attendance. Robert Cameron, tax collector, was present to discuss the collection of delinquent taxes. The Croydon public school will be open on Wednesday evening next from seven to nine o'clock for public inspection. The public is urged to visit the school.

Andrew Jackson, supervising principal, informed the board, that the librarian, Alexandria Mico, reported that during the month of September, 1,216 books had been circulated in the junior high school during the three weeks and two days that the school was in session this month. This gives an average circulation of three books for every child in the school.

Forty-Four Inspections Have Been Completed

Forty-four of the approximately 51 public eating and drinking places in Bristol which are subject to the State's licensing law have been inspected thus far by Bristol's Health Officer, James H. Brooks.

Proprietors who have not as yet filed their applications with the Health Board are requested to do so at once, as the present licenses expire November 23rd.

There were six cases of chicken-pox and one each of whooping cough and dog bite reported during the past month.

There was the usual inspection made of dairies in Bristol.

ONE MAN'S OPINION -

By Walter Kiernan (Distributed by International News Service)

Trains from Maine are packed with returning Republicans... thin, gaunt but the light of hope in their eyes.

Mr. Truman promises a statement on the election after a reasonable search for something to say.

Several conferences have been held but there is no decision yet on whether to stick to the old reason... "blame it on Hoover"... or find a new one.

One thing the results seem to have proved is that an election cannot be won by transcription.

Henry Wallace says the Democratic party either must become more progressive or die... several Democrats seem to feel that a major operation such as removing a lung or two might help.

It happened that Russia was observing the anniversary of a people's revolution at the same time.

I hear Harry wired Joe "congratulations on your revolution." Joe responded "you've got me stuck for a diplomatic answer."

RESTORING PRODUCTION

The view of many Americans was expressed by Donald M. Nelson, former chairman of the War Production Board, when he said that the strife between labor and management in this country since the end of the war has been a national disgrace.

If it continues at its present pace, he asserted, it can seriously disrupt the economic processes of the country and might conceivably wreck them. Anyone who planned to destroy the country and its way of doing things, he said, "could scarcely have adopted a sounder formula."

It is bad enough that this country cannot return to a basis of continued production that will meet the needs of the American people for products they eagerly wish to buy. But it is even worse that a continuation of interruptions will cause this country to fall behind in world competition.

Mr. Nelson brought out the latter possibility sharply when he said that for the first time since the Civil War, America has a mighty competitor whose industrial strength is potentially as great as that of the United States, and whose resources may be greater. Russia, he said, is building in the image of American industrial technology and intends to develop her resources more effectively.

America does not want war with any nation of the world, but it is still true that if a war were thrust upon this country, it would surely suffer from the fact that peacetime production had greatly lagged.

NEW MOSCOW MYSTERY

Inasmuch as the United States pays a large part of the bills and probably will continue to do so, it is a little difficult to determine what inspires Fedor T. Gusev, the Soviet delegate, to demand that the United Nations drastically cut its expenses. This must be the first time on record that Russia—or any country, for that matter—has objected to the distribution of some other nation's money.

But if the precise reason for this unexpected economy move is not announced, there is at least a hint to be had in the bill of particulars which Mr. Gusev presents. He asks that the London office of UN be abolished and an end made to the world-wide information service now being rendered.

Can it be, then, that the Soviet wants the same kind of iron curtain around UN that it has drawn about its own country? Is it so deeply committed to the outmoded principles of secret diplomacy that it rejects the idea of letting peoples everywhere know what is going on in the assembly and Security Council? Is it afraid to have the light of publicity beat fully and clearly upon its own actions?

It is to be hoped that the Red delegate has some better reasons than those for his present attitude. But until he states them there will be no alternative but to assume that his country once again stands against processes which free nations approve.

SHOULD TRUMAN RESIGN?

parallel between the two forms of government, however, is not sufficiently exact in other matters to make the argument hold water. Great Britain's government is built around the concept of a hereditary and continuing, though limited, monarchy.

The underlying concept of the American form (though this has often been forgotten) is that of cooperation—cooperation between various branches and departments of government, all of them answerable to the people, though in different ways and at different times.

The big practical difficulty, and one which strikes to the heart of the matter in the field of theory, is that any Republican President thus named would never be accepted as leader either of his own party or of the American people.

This has very little to do with relative ability. In fact, it must not be forgotten that the theory of majority election is not that the best man thus is selected, but that the majority of a political party and of the public as a whole is thus "committed" to support of their executive because they helped elect him.

President Truman himself ought to be fully aware of the liabilities of trying to be Chief Executive over a party and a people who did not elect him. So far as the Democrats were concerned, Truman was crammed down their throats at their convention, after a deal in which the party itself was not consulted. The people themselves elected him with obvious reluctance, and only under the belief that President Roosevelt was likely to survive his fourth term.

Whom could the President name? Senator Vandenberg has been suggested. His ability is unquestioned, and his appointment would leave foreign policy approximately where it now stands. Moreover, he is approximately a middle of the roader in most Republican questions.

But as President he still would not be the Republican Party's president, any more than he would be the American people's president. The Republicans had a chance to select Vandenberg, if they wanted to; he made a serious bid for nomination back in 1940. But the most support he got, in the convention's six roll-calls that year, was 76 votes out of 1000 delegates.

Other Republicans who might be considered have the same or similar liabilities. None but Dewey, Landon and Hoover has ever been nominated for the Presidency by his party. Of these, only Dewey could be considered. Mention of Dewey focuses the fundamental objection to any such scheme: should President Truman or the Republican be the one to name him for the Presidency?

Everything considered, it is just as well that the proposal has little chance of being taken seriously.

Neither President Truman nor the Democratic party has any reason to be happy about their immediate future; but they would not help it by trying to run out on their obligations.

Both of them would be better advised to spend their energies trying to make the coming two years a period of proper give-and-take.

Cooperation will get them much farther than anything which smacks of being a smart political trick.

be sitting pretty, while we have to go without all these things, because we need the dough to pay for the war.
"We have had an appalling summer, worst for very many years; our fruit nearly all ruined and the farmers all around have lost heavily on their crops.
"We don't write to you as often as we would like to, as things are so monotonous and dreary here, and we don't seem to have anything cheery to write about.
"We don't get a chicken to eat here from one year's end to another, as what there is around (and they are down to a minimum) on account of feeding stuff are all sold in the black market at fabulous prices.
"We'd love to know how you are getting on. If you were over here, you wouldn't have an earthly chance of building anything. You'd have to get a permit for any of the materials you would require, which they wouldn't allow you in the first place, because you weren't working for the Government, and if you managed to build anything out of any material you might have by you, they would soon make you pull it down, because it wasn't done by their permission, which they wouldn't give you anyway.
"Well, there we are on our own troubles again, but we would like to hear how you get on over this sort of thing.
"Our milk ration being such a small allowance, we have taken to drinking goat's milk, and it is not at all bad.
"Believe me, although we are living in the heart of the country, we don't get any farm produce at all, it is all taken by the Government or the black market, and of course we miss the fish we used to have from the shop.
"But still life is sweet and we are still running the Lancaster on the meagre petrol ration. I have just paid through the nose for some re-treaded tyres, twice the price new tyres used to be, but she is still running sweet and we get around.
"We hope you are getting a better deal than we are."
Socialist "austerity"—as the British call it—seems to boil down to two questions: How much of your money shall we take to build houses for those who work (and vote) for us? Or, what is my fair share of what you have earned?"

Two new members, Edward K. Kikel, Pineville, and Linford Fleming, were welcomed.

Long-range plans for the new Bucks County Joint high school at Newtown were discussed by County Superintendent Charles Boehm, at a dinner held at Quakertown, Saturday evening.

The building of the new school is not to be anticipated for either two or three years, said Boehm, speaking informally at the 18th annual reunion and dinner of the class of 1929 of Richboro high school.

Richboro high, started about 1908. Northampton township authorities, graduated its last class last year, and is now one of four townships sending its young people to Quakertown high school until the new school can be built.

Sportsmen's Briefs

BY JOE ELBERSON

Very discouraging . . . that just about sums up the feeling of 99% of the hunters who were afield for the opening of small game season in this area last Friday.

There were some exceptions, of course. I know of one party of Morrisville gunners (three men) who were back home an hour after the opening of the season with a total of six cock birds. But I know of hundreds of others who didn't even see a pheasant after working all day.

And rabbits were just as plentiful as pheasants were scarce. A good many fellows, however, didn't shoot at the bunnies because of the exceedingly warm weather preceding the opening of the season.

I gunned with my brother, Ray, and cousin, Frank Everett, on 200 acres of excellent farmland in Middletown Township. At the end of the first day we had just two pheasants. That was the total number of birds we jumped all day. By actual count we started 25 rabbits. It was the first time in the last ten years that we didn't take our limit of ring-necked opening day.

According to game warden Roy Stackhouse there were far fewer hunters in the field on opening day than had been expected. He said this was also the case on last Saturday. A total of eight foxes were reported to him as killed on the first day.

It was really hard work, even with dogs, last Friday. Cover was exceptionally heavy and thick, with the temperatures high enough to make it uncomfortable almost from the opening at 9 in the morning.

Reports from the upper end of Bucks County indicate that gunners who hunted above Doylestown generally made out much better than here in the lower end.

I'm convinced that there are still some birds around. Maybe after several good frosts have reduced the cover we'll get a few more shots than on opening day.

Meeting . . . next Tuesday evening, November 12, the Bristol Fish & Game Protective Association will meet at 8 o'clock in the Odd Fellows' Hall, Walnut and Radcliffe streets. This will probably be the last meeting for 1946 and president Johnny Johnson urges all members to be on hand for the meeting. All interested sportsmen have a cordial invitation to attend.

Notes . . . delegates from 8 clubs were on hand for the November meeting of the Bucks County Federation of Sportsmen's Clubs in Doylestown on Monday evening. Clubs represented included: Bristol, Edgely, Morrisville, New Hope, Middletown, Piletown, Bucks County, and Great Swamp. Delegates gave the same information on small game as did local gunners . . . very poor, generally, with upper-end clubs making better reports than lower-end clubs.

One very interesting step was taken by delegates at this meeting. This was the decision on the part of the Federation to contact the authorities at Graterford Penitentiary in Montgomery County and ask them if it will be possible for inmates of that institution to raise pheasants for interested Bucks County sportsmen's groups.

It was pointed out that a similar program has been underway for some time for the Montgomery County Federation of Sportsmen's Clubs and that the setup is a fine one. The only cost to be borne by the Federation would be the cost of material for the pens and the cost of feed.

This move on the part of the Bucks County Federation is a very commendable one and I hope the prison authorities are in a position to co-operate. If they are every club in the Federation should be interested in having pheasants raised for them. The cost, per bird, would probably be far less in this type of program than in any other type of pheasant raising.

Shotgun shells . . . if you are completely out of 12-gauge shells and you hurry here is a fellow who can help you out: Irv. Scheffey, 316 Lafayette St. He has a limited number of shells which he is selling on a first come, first served basis.

B. H. S. Eleven To Cross River To Battle Burlington Tomorrow

GAME STARTS AT 2.15

New Jersey Team, Like The Local Unit, is Having An "In and Out" Season

Bristol high school eleven will cross the river tomorrow to meet Burlington high in its annual "Little Brown Jug" contest. Game is scheduled to begin at 2.15 p. m.

Burlington is in possession of the "Brown Jug" by virtue of its win over the Bunnies last season but Coach McClister and his boys feel confident that tomorrow night the jug will find a resting place in the Bristol high school.

The Jersey team, like Bristol, is having an in-and-out season. Sometimes the team looks like world-beaters for a few quarters and suddenly there is a collapse. Coach "Fats" Costello's boys have won but one game, beating Morrisville, 34-0. It tied Manasquan and Palmyra and lost to Mt. Holly, Moorestown, and Riverside. The team has scored 61 points and had 73 scored against it.

Coach McClister's kids have beaten Trenton Catholic and Conshohocken, held Murrell-Dobbin to a deadlock, and lost to Vineland, Pottstown, Abington, and Langhorne. Bristol has scored 37 points while its opposition has rolled up 80.

McClister is hoping for a repetition of the Trenton Catholic game when his lads were at their best. In this game his line was charging all the time, spilling the Trenton players before they could get started. Since then, his line has been practically at a standstill, little charging being done. During the practice sessions this week, McClister was forcing his linemen to charge and feels that if this is done, Burlington will be beaten.

It is most likely that Bristol's starting lineup will have Caucei and Heath, ends; Foltz and Iannucci, tackles; Singer and Monachello, guards; Pone, center; Stiles, quarterback; Sottile and Harm, half-backs; and Accardi fullback.
